On Dad's Day Serve Cheese Tidbits to Tingle Male Taste Buds

To give Dad a treat on Father's Day, or when he hangs out the "For Men Only" party sign, try a menu built around cheese, for cheese in any form is one of father's (and his friends') favorite foods.

Whether assembled on a wooden tray or the family's most prized silver platter, a cheese tray can offer variety in color, flavor, and texture to please all. Men usually like natural or processed American Cheddar, Swiss, Liederkranz, Blue and Camembert.

Men like spreads and dunking mixtures. Here is a good one: Blend together until light and fluffy a 3-ounce package of cream cheese, half a mashed avocado, a teaspoon grated lemon rind, and lemon juice; sprinkle with chopped chives.

It's easy to cut out the letters D-A-D in the red wax rind on Edam cheese. A paper pattern fastened to the cheese with a straight pin and a small paring knife are the only tools needed. Cut through the red wax coating and remove outline to allow natural color to show through.

An assortment of crackers might include pretzels on a long stick, pretzel sticks, butter wafers, triangle thins, and whole wheat wafers. Any type of dry bread is a natural.

The cheese delight, rarebit, is, in the words of a famed Oregon poet, "something to adequately make the edibles aid and abet the gobblers."

Amazing thing about this is that the liquid may be ale or beer, milk or cream. If ale or beer, be sure it is at room temperature. The recipe can be varied by adding 1/4 teaspoon mustard or 1/4 teaspoon Worcestershire or a tablespoon of butter unless cream is used.

Grate 1/2 lb. good aged cheddar cheese in upper part of double boiler or in chafing dish with hot water pan. Add 1/2 to 3/4 cup of liquid, 1/2 teaspoon salt, dash cayenne and stir constantly until cheese is melted and smooth.

Serve at once on toasted soda crackers or on Holland sauce. Recipe yields four servings.

For Mexican rarebit, heat 2 tablespoons butter and lightly brown 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper and 2 tablespoons minced onion. Pour 1 cup milk over crumbs made from 6 soda crackers (about 1/2 cup crumbs); add to onion-pepper mixture; cheese and pepper to taste. Stir until blended; then add 2 cups grated cheddar cheese and 2 cups stewed tomatoes. Serve hot on crackers or rusk.

Beverage for cheese is usually beer. Whatever the contents of the beaker, be sure it is chilled, and have plenty more on ice.
